Introduction

I still remember the day everything clicked for me.

It was a warm Sunday afternoon in Lagos; you know those lazy, golden afternoons when life feels soft and promising.

I was sitting at a café in Victoria Island, staring at my third cup of coffee, heartbroken yet again.

Another "situationship" had just ended. Another man who said he loved me... but somehow couldn't give me the commitment I craved.

As I sat there, it hit me.

I had been doing it all wrong. Not because I wasn't pretty enough, smart enough, or good enough. But because I didn't understand how attraction truly works when it comes to serious, rich, and emotionally available men.

From that day forward, I made a decision.

I would treat my love life like a craft; something I could master, refine, and elevate.

And darling, what a beautiful transformation it has been.

That's why I created this book.

Not as a random collection of advice, but as a trusted handbook, a personal map you can return to whenever you need direction or a little nudge in the right place.

You see, the secrets you're about to discover didn't fall from the sky.

They are the result of years of quiet study, tough lessons, and stunning victories.

And here's the thing:

Don't treat this book like a novel you read once and keep aside.

Think of it as your personal blueprint, your beauty manual for mastering the art of attracting serious, committed, and high-value men.

As you go through it, underline the parts that hit home.

Practice the techniques.

Refine your energy until it becomes effortless.

And please, don't fall into that tempting trap of saying, "I know this already", because knowing is one thing, but living it is another.

I promise you:

If you stay with the process, one day you'll look up, just like I did, and realize you've become the woman men pray to find but rarely do.

Now, let's get started, love.

Your beautiful transformation begins now.

Part 1: How To Find Him (Who He Is, Where He's Hiding, When He Shows Up, And Exactly How To Meet Him)

The moment you meet a man, those first ten seconds matter more than you think.

What you do or say right there and then will set the tone for everything that follows.

Will he just be another random stranger you brush past, or will he become a friend, and maybe something even sweeter?

That tiny window is what we call the 10-Second Rule.

Now here's the part most women don't realize.

Many amazing men slip away in those first few seconds.

You wouldn't believe how many of them are standing right there, ready to strike up a conversation, only to chicken out at the last moment because they lose their nerve.

I remember something a friend once told me, and it stuck with me.

She said, "A woman should never be easy. But in the first ten seconds of a conversation... be easy."

And honestly, it's some of the best advice you'll ever get.

It takes a lot of courage for a man to approach a woman, especially when he's outside his comfort zone.

That's why the 10-Second Rule matters so much.

When you make the first few moments feel easy and light, you give him the confidence to keep coming closer.

Later on, you can be a little more of a challenge.

You can show your standards, your sass, your sparkle.

But at the start, all you need is a warm smile and a soft, open energy that says, "You're safe here."

Give him that grace for ten seconds.

That's all you need to figure out if he's worth another ten... and maybe even more.

With that in mind, let's dive into the next part.

Let's talk about where, when, and how to meet the kind of men you actually want in your life.

Chapter 1: Where to Meet

Meeting new people can be hard. If it were easy, we wouldn't have countless apps and platforms built just to make it easier.

These apps work for some. For others, not so much.

So, let's talk about the options available for meeting men.

There are two main ways: Online or Offline.

First, the online route.

Tinder, Instagram, Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn have birthed thousands of relationships — many leading to marriage.

And many more will start and flourish there.

If you don't have profiles on these platforms yet, now is the time.

If you do, but you're not getting the kind of attention you want, it's time to switch things up.

Ask yourself:

- When last did you change your profile picture?
- What does your "About Me" say?
- Do you actually reply to DMs?
- Have you ever slid into a man's DM? (We'll cover this fully later.)
- How smooth are your conversations online?

Also, have you heard of matchmaking services hosted on social platforms?

Some have real success stories. Give them a shot.

Now, let's talk Offline.

Successful men are not hiding on another planet.

They drive the same roads.

Shop at the same malls.

Fly from the same airports.

You might not cross paths every day, but trust me, they are around.

That said, some places make it easier to meet them than others.

- Gyms:

Men who value their health hit the gym, early morning, after work, or weekends.

They're not gym rats or bodybuilders.

They're just busy men who want to stay fit.

Tip: Choose gyms located in neighborhoods where the kind of men you're looking for would feel at home.

- Airports:

If you want men with high-paying jobs or successful businesses, airports are gold mines. You can meet them during flight delays, at lounges, in queues, or even in-flight.

Simple conversation starters:

"Are you heading home?"

"What book are you reading?" (Airports are full of readers.)

- Bars and Clubs:

Contrary to popular belief, not every man at a bar is a one-night-stand hunter.

Many good, hardworking men unwind there too.

Yes, you might meet a few players, but you might also meet someone special.

- Yoga Classes:

Yoga isn't just stretching, it's a whole culture of mindfulness, balance, and healing. And poor men don't practice mindfulness. Only successful men do. So joining a studio class (not a private one) is a good option. And before you join, ask about the male-to-female ratio before signing up.

- Running Clubs:

Joggers are part of an unspoken "tribe."

They greet each other even if they've never met.

A shy lady can shine here, just by showing up regularly.

- Churches:

If you want a God-fearing, tongue-speaking, vision-seeing man, church is a great hunting ground.

Singles programs, meet-and-greets, and prayer sessions for singles can open doors.

- Co-work Spaces:

Coworking hubs are filled with upwardly mobile freelancers, entrepreneurs, and remote workers. These guys are rich or atleast doing well because most of them have high paying jobs (either in naira or dollars). Hanging out at a co-work space is a smart idea.

- Group Trips and Picnics:

Join travel and picnic groups.

Ask questions before booking: Are they mostly singles?

Most group trips organize fun activities that make mingling easy.

Chapter 2: Different Types of Men

When it comes to dating, I've seen things.

One time, I thought I had met the one. Fine boy. Sweet talker. Took me on dates. Said all the right things. His friends were already calling me "wifey." Until one day, small argument like this, and he said, "You should be grateful I even chose you."

That night, I realized something. Love is not enough. You must know the kind of man you are dealing with. Before you carry your heart and future and give it to somebody who will break it like gala.

Anyways, when it comes to dating, you'll meet different types of men. The emotionally unavailable ones. The fuck boys. The commitment phobes.

But when it comes to marriage, it's a different ball game. There are only 3 types of men you need to know.

Before you start talking about marriage, you must have at least dated. It's during the dating phase you should open your eyes and study the man. Know what he's made of. Know the kind of man you're dealing with before you sign up for forever.

Because forever is too long to spend with the wrong person.

Take your time. Study these 3 types of men you'll meet in marriage.

First type.

- The Gardener

He's every woman's dream man. Hard to spot sometimes because he hides in plain sight. He knows he's rare and that responsible women want him, so he carries himself with a certain pride.

Once he gets serious with you, he starts watering your life. Your emotions. Your dreams. Your business. Everything you're into will start growing.

If you run a business, with his guidance you'll see real growth. Topline will grow. Bottom line will grow. You'll expand into new markets. Add more products. The whole nine yards.

If you're a 9 to 5 babe, your bosses will notice you. You'll get good performance reviews. You'll start climbing the ladder.

A Gardener won't let you settle. He'll push you to become more. Achieve more. And because he's rare, he knows his value. He's a prize. And sooner or later, he'll find the woman who deserves him.

- The Scavenger.

This one only finds needy women attractive. If you're jobless, struggling, or have low self-esteem, you're his spec.

Scavengers are like vultures. They don't go after strong and confident women. They chase the ones who are broken. The ones who need saving. The ones who are desperate for love, money, attention, anything.

At first, he'll look like a clean-cut, responsible man. Some scavengers even have money. But if you give it time, you'll see what he really is.

Most women who marry when they're at their lowest end up with scavengers.

He won't help you grow. He'll keep you small. Dependent. Needy. He'll give you just enough to survive but never enough to thrive. Because if you grow, he loses his power over you. And he can't stand that.

- The Hunter.

This one hunts and kills anything good in your life.

Your career. Your business. Your beauty. Your confidence. Your spirit.

First thing he'll do is hunt them down one by one.

If you have a good job, he'll ask you to quit. If you have a business, he'll find a way to kill it. He'll tell you a woman shouldn't be too ambitious. He'll say the home must come first. That a ship can't have two captains.

At first, he'll come as Prince Charming. Fine. Smart. Rich. Sweet talker. He'll have everyone around you falling for his act. Even you.

But once you're hooked, the mask drops. You'll battle constant criticisms. Impossible demands. His selfishness.

You'll start giving up parts of yourself just to please him. Your dreams will die. Your self-esteem will shrink. You'll wake up one day and realize your whole life revolves around him. And you don't even recognize yourself anymore.

That's why the game is not just about getting a man.

It's about getting the right man, the man who's already rich, ready, and built for the kind of woman you are becoming.

Not the one you have to beg, chase, or shrink yourself for.

Study these types.

Spot them early.

Choose with your eyes wide open.

Because when you attract the right man, the right marriage will follow.

Chapter 3: How to Meet Men (Without Looking Desperate)

Finding a man you like sometimes feels like running a marathon barefoot.

You need patience. You need positivity. And you need even more patience.

But let me tell you, there is a thin line between being patient and wasting your time.

I will show you how to stand on the winning side.

Here is how to make your patience sweet and fruitful without making it look like you are hunting for a man.

- Go Out Alone or With Only 1 Friend

Men are not as bold as you think o.

Many of them are shy. They are battling fear. Their heart is beating fast like drum. Even the ones that look confident are usually scared inside.

Now imagine you are sitting with five loud friends.

My sister, you have made his work ten times harder.

He is not only thinking about you. He is thinking about your whole committee.

But when you are alone, or with just one friend, you look more approachable.

You look like someone he can greet and talk to without shame.

Also, when you are relaxed and happy, a good man will notice you.

He will feel safer to approach because even if you say no, it will not feel like disgrace.

But when you are inside a big group, even if he likes you, fear will hold him back. If you must go out with friends, know when to walk away small and give destiny space to meet you.

- Make Eye Contact

If you want to be noticed, use your eyes.

When you are out and you see a man you like, do not just look away shyly. Catch his eye. Hold the gaze for one or two seconds. Then look away and smile.

You have just passed a big message without opening your mouth.

When you lock eyes with a man you like, you are telling him "You can come and talk to me."

You are opening the door for him. Simple eye contact can be the beginning of something sweet.

- Appear Unoccupied

When you are out, stop looking busy even when you are not. Drop the phone. Drop the laptop. Drop the magazine. No need to scroll Instagram from morning till night. A man will see you glued to your phone and think, "She is busy. Let me not disturb her."

Even if you are bored, pretend you are not. Sit and sip your coffee. Look around. Smile.

Be available for conversation. Earphones too. Remove them. They block you from the world. A man cannot approach when he thinks you cannot hear him. This is the time to practice mindfulness.

Phone down. Ear open. Face open.

- Smile (And Mean It)

Many women say, "I looked at him. I liked him. Why didn't he come?"

My dear, a man cannot read your mind. Sometimes they do not even know if you are single.

They do not know if you are waiting for your husband.

So they will just admire you from afar and leave you alone. But you can invite them closer with just one small thing. Smile.

Not the type of smile you give a random person on the road.

I mean a genuine, sweet, "I see you" kind of smile. A smile tells him you are approachable.

It gives him courage to start a conversation.

It makes him feel like he will not get embarrassed if he comes to say hello.

A simple, real smile can change everything.

- Become More Visible

After you have dressed fine, smiled well and dropped your phone, you now have to be seen.

Do not go to a party and hide in the darkest corner like thief.

Sit where people can see you.

Near the door. Near the bar. Somewhere there is movement.

If you hide, how will destiny find you?

Also, help men by giving them something easy to talk about.

Wear something interesting. Maybe a nice bag. A bold necklace. A beautiful scarf.

It is easier for a man to say "I like your bag" than to say "I find you attractive."

Give them small chance to talk.

It can lead to bigger things.

Attracting committed, rich men is not about chasing. It is about putting yourself where you can be seen. Looking available. Looking happy. Smiling. Being open.

The man that wants to love you and invest in you will find you. And from there, it will not just end in boyfriend and girlfriend. It will lead to a beautiful, serious relationship and finally, marriage.

Chapter 4: The Initial Approach

Let me tell you a little story.

A few years ago, I was at a wedding in Edo state. I noticed a tall, handsome guy standing by the drink table. He wasn't doing much, just sipping his drink and scrolling through his phone.

The old me would have admired him from afar, hoping he'd notice me, maybe accidentally bump into me, and spark a conversation like in the movies. But something in me snapped that day. I thought, "Why am I waiting? If I like him, I should at least give us a chance to meet."

So, I walked up to him, complimented his shoes (they were pretty nice, to be fair), and just like that, we got talking. He ended up asking for my number.

Moral of the story? I made the first move but he chased me after that.

Now, this chapter and the next are for 3 categories of women:

- Category 1: Women who are tired of waiting. Tired of waiting for men to notice them, approach them, and decide if they're worthy of love.
- Category 2: Women who live life on their own terms. Women who are bold enough to choose the man they want instead of leaving it to chance.
- Category 3: Women who feel like they're on the verge of getting desperate, not fitting fully into the first or second category but open to learning and changing.

Let's face it: there's no rulebook that says only men can make the first move.

In most parts of the world, though, women have been conditioned to believe otherwise. It's almost taboo for a woman to walk up to a man she fancies. So even if she likes him, if he doesn't make a move, nothing happens.

This way of thinking puts women at a huge disadvantage.

It gives men all the power — to choose, to reject, to decide.

And if the men who approach a woman don't fit her standards, she's left with two choices: reject and stay single, or settle out of frustration.

This should not be the case. It's time we turn the tables. It's time women sat in the driver's seat of their love lives. It's time only men who meet your standards — in looks, ambition, values, income bracket, whatever matters to you — get the privilege of chasing you.

Note: I said let them chase you. Not the other way around.

You were probably thinking you'd have to do all the chasing, right? Nope.

You don't have to chase. You only have to initiate with class and feminine subtlety, then take your foot off the gas and watch him prove his interest.

From my experience, it's much better to attract a man than to chase him.

Chasing scares men off. It also makes you seem desperate, and men can smell desperation from a mile away.

Your goal is simply to get his attention. Once you do that, the ball is in his court.

Now, I won't lie to you, making the first move can feel scary.

Your heart will pound. Your palms will sweat. You might even freeze up.

But guess what? Men feel that fear too when they approach women! So when you make the first move, you're actually doing him a huge favor. You're saving him the stress, the nerves, the overthinking.

If he's a good man, he'll be grateful you made it easier for him. He'll admire your confidence, because confident women are unforgettable.

Now, making the first move won't ever be easy, but it gets easier with practice.

This chapter is here to give you practical, easy steps you can start using today to overcome shyness, kick fear to the curb, and start attracting the kind of men you truly want.

Let's dive right in.

- Overcoming Fear and Shyness

The first thing you must do is throw away the lie that says a man must be the first to approach.

After that, face the two enemies: fear and shyness. Your heart will race. Your palms will sweat. You will feel silly. It is normal. Everyone feels like that at first. The good news?

There are two simple ways to kill the fear.

First, practice starting conversations. Second, reframe rejection.

The whole essence of approaching him is to create a moment that allows the both of you to talk and maybe exchange contact cards. If you are a good conversation starter, approaching him will be less difficult for you. If you're not, stay glued to the next few pages. They will help a great deal.

- Talk to Strangers

You meet strangers every day. Start talking to them.

Set a personal target. Talk to at least two new people every week. It could be at the supermarket, in a taxi, at work, anywhere. Talk about anything: traffic, music, football, the price of garri, politics, crazy landlords.

You start the conversation. You don't wait. The more you practice, the easier it becomes.

And if anyone ignores you? Their loss. You're a princess, so keep moving.

The more you normalize talking to people, the easier it becomes to talk to any man you find attractive.

- Practice With Men Paid to Talk to You

Yes, you heard me. There are men whose job is to be polite to you. You still don't want to consider it? My dear, these are regular guys meet them at airports, gyms, hotels, bars, malls, restaurants. They wear uniforms. They smile at you. They open doors for you. I'm talking about: Flight attendants, gym instructors,

Male ushers, bouncers, bartenders, waiters, petrol attendants.

Use them for practice. Start harmless conversations with them.

Flirt if you like. The goal is simple. Practice confidence.

Nothing more. No strings attached.

Remember, mastery comes from practice.

Nothing in life is hard. It's just unfamiliar.

- Fear of Rejection

Rejection sucks. In work. In life. In love. But rejection is not the end of the world. Most men will not even reject you. Do you know why? Because they hardly ever get approached by women. You might be the first woman ever to walk up to him. Even if he is married. Even if he is not in a good mood. Even if you are not his type. He will still respect your boldness.

Confidence is sexy. Confidence is magnetic. Confidence makes men want you more.

So keep practicing. Keep getting better. Very soon, you will be able to sweep any man you fancy off his feet.

Fear? Fear will pack its load and leave.

Here are Some Conversation Starters

Let's start with some killer conversation openers. They are great for opening a conversation with someone new or someone you haven't seen in a while. And they're far more interesting than the standard "Where are you from?" and "what do you do?" See for yourself:

How is your week/weekend going?

This one is nice and simple but can open a conversation in a lot of different directions—perhaps they've had a weekend stuck in the office working, or they've had an amazing week of sales. It's important to give them some information to reply to, too.

Do you have a __? Me too! Tell me more.

Anything you have that is similar to the person you are interested in is a great conversation starter online or offline. We like people like us. This is known as the similarity-attraction effect. Fill in the blank with your similarity, and then ask for more details.

What three words best describe you?

Find out how they view themselves and don't forget to ask follow-up questions about each of the words they chose.

What would be your perfect weekend?

See what they are into, and you'll have plenty to talk about. Everyone loves talking about things they love.

What's your favorite way to waste time?

Similar to the perfect weekend question, this question tries to get at what they really enjoy doing so that you can both talk about it.

What do you think about religion?

Do you have any? If they don't, there is probably a story behind it. Africans are a religious bunch. If they do have one, you can talk about where they worship, where they celebrate the popular religious festivities, etc.

What were you really into when you were a kid?

Every kid goes through phases when they were REALLY into one thing. For many, it was street soccer. You can ask about the position they usually play, why they didn't pursue a professional football career, etc. For others, it can be video games, music, books, etc. Now you can find out what they obsessed about when they were a kid.

If you could have any animal as a pet, what animal would you choose?

This one is fun because a blank check pet choice can lead to some great answers. And you can always transition the conversation into pets they had/have.

If you are to open a business, what kind of business would it be?

This one can really be a huge conversation starter if the person you are talking to is in any way entrepreneurial. It's always fun to hear and discuss new business ideas. Don't forget to ask for lots of details about their dream business.

Who is your favorite entertainer (comedian, musician, actor, etc.)?

Pop culture and entertainment are great topics for conversation, and this question is a good entry point into a larger conversation about what kind of entertainment they like.

What is a controversial opinion you have?

So, don't immediately start bashing their opinion if you don't like it. I mean, you asked the question after all. Let them explain why they have the opinion and their reasoning behind it. Not everyone has to have the same opinions as you. And if it's super out there or evil, well it's good to know so you can avoid them in the future.

Who had the biggest impact on the person you have become?

An awesome question for keeping it positive, and they'll be talking about someone they love, so it'll be easy to jump into a conversation about whoever that person is and why they are so awesome.

What is the most annoying habit someone can have? Find out what annoys them, chances are it probably annoys you too. Then it's easy to step into a conversation about annoying habits.

If you had to change your name, what would your new name be?

This one is a little creative and fun. They might have to think about it for a bit, or they may have an answer right off. Don't forget to ask them why and what might be a good last name as well.

Where is the most beautiful place you have been?

This one will probably lead to a good travel story. And conversations about travel are always fun.

Where do you spend most of your free time/day?

Find out what their day-to-day looks like. It'll be easy to start up a conversation about any of the things they do on a regular.

What's the funniest TV series you have seen?

This will work best if he is a movie lover and is perfect for starting a conversation about a show you both are into, and if you haven't watched the show they mention, you now have a new show to check out!

If you don't feel comfortable asking personal questions right out of the gate, use your environment and surroundings to start the conversation. Comment on the food and drinks. Ask about the venue or location. You also can ask general interest questions, such as their favorite sports team. It works!!!

Chapter 5: How to Approach Men Like a Badass

The first time I approached a man, I was terrified. That was in the Edo wedding I told you about in the previous chapter.

Do you still remember?

Okay.

Here's the part I didn't tell you. That "moment" I gathered the courage to complement the fine rich man, I felt like I was about to jump off a cliff.

My palms were sweaty, my heart was pounding, and my mind was screaming, "What if he ignores you? What if you embarrass yourself?"

But I did it anyway. I smiled, walked up to him, and said, "Hi."

He smiled back and said, "Hey."

That simple exchange changed everything for me.

It taught me a powerful lesson: Approaching a man instantly reveals what kind of man he is.

If he's kind, open, and receptive, you'll know. If he's rude, dismissive, or arrogant, you'll know too. And either way, you win.

One word — "Hi" — can save you weeks, months, or even years of wasted time and heartbreak.

Now, let's talk about the several ways to approach men.

Here are 6 of the most common ones.

You can choose one, practice all of them, and pick your favorite:

1. The Bump-and-Flatter Approach

"Accidentally" bump into him at a party, mall, or café. Laugh it off and say, "Oh, sorry – I'm usually clumsy around fine people."

Instantly, he'll feel flattered. You're already close to him physically — easy gateway for a conversation.

Bonus: Most men don't get daily compliments. He'll enjoy the attention. If he's interested, he'll take it from there.

2. The Compliment Approach

Simple. Say something nice. His scent. His shoes. His beard. His energy.

Example:

"Wow, you smell really good."

"Nice watch. Very clean."

Compliments unlock flirty conversations effortlessly.

Because real talk? Guys crave compliments more than they admit.

They just don't get them often.

3. The AHAQ Approach (Ask Him Any Question)

Need an opener? Ask a casual question:

- "Is this seat taken?"
- "Are you the last person on this queue?"

- “Please, do you know where XYZ Street is?”

When you ask a guy a question, you create a door for conversation. And trust me — once the door is open, it's easier to walk through.

From one innocent question, a full-blown romance can sprout. (Ask your parents.)

4. The Direct Approach

This one is for my confident babes. No tricks. No games. No handkerchiefs. You simply walk up to him, smile, and say what's on your mind.

“Hey, I’m Tonye. I like your vibe. Want to grab a coffee?”

Or if you want to spice it up:

“Hi. I like you. Would you like to be a man and ask me out?” (With a playful smile, of course.)

Real recognize real. Men admire women who own their desires and make bold moves. Be direct. Be sweet. Be unforgettable.

Side note: this is how one of my friends (Chidinma) got her husband. It happened at a lounge at Ikoyi, he was frustrated with client calls that evening, and she went to him and approached him. But I don’t know for you, Chidinma has a lot of “mind”.

5. The AHFH Approach (Ask Him For Help)

“I could really use your help with something...”

MAGIC WORDS.

When you say this to a man, you tap into his primal need to be needed. It doesn't even have to be a big deal. It could be:

- "Can you help me carry this drink?"
- "Can you hold my jacket for a second?"

Once he helps you, conversation becomes natural. No pressure. No awkwardness. Just human connection. If he's into you, he'll take the chance to keep talking. If not, you lose nothing.

6. The White Handkerchief Approach

Old-school but GOLD.

In Victorian times, women weren't allowed to make the first move. So what did they do? They'd "accidentally" drop a handkerchief while walking past a man.

Of course, the man would pick it up, return it — and boom — a conversation starts.

And guess what? The woman orchestrated the whole thing.

Today, you don't have to carry a handkerchief.

But you can still "drop" opportunities:

- Drop your phone (gently abeg!)
- Drop your napkin
- Or simply hover around in a way that invites him to approach

Give a man an excuse to speak to you. Most of them are just dying for an opening.

Bottom Line? Approaching a man isn't hard. It's smart.

It's brave. And it puts you in charge of your love life. Forget waiting around for fate.

Sometimes, you are fate. One "Hi" could change everything.

Chapter 6: When Men Get Intimidated

I remember my friend Funmi.

At 36, she walked down the aisle with the love of her life, after years of battling the stigma of being a successful, single woman.

Funmi had a great job, owned her own home, and traveled whenever she pleased. Yet, each birthday, the questions grew louder. Family members, friends, even colleagues, all asking when she would "settle down," as if her life wasn't already full.

Finding love wasn't easy for her. Not because she wasn't beautiful or lovable. But because the higher she rose in life, the harder it seemed to meet a man who wasn't intimidated by her.

It felt like the more she had going for her, the more men fell away.

But she didn't give up or shrink herself. Instead, she made a mindset shift, one that led her to her husband today.

I'm sharing Funmi's story because you need to know: your situation is not unique, it's not your fault, and it's definitely not spiritual.

Yes, it's true especially in the society we live in.

Once women cross certain ages, they are often faced with the social stigma of being single.

This, on its own, can be mortifying. But it gets worse once you hit a certain income level.

You seemingly start repelling men. You find it hard to meet dates. The men in your circle are mostly colleagues, business partners, brothers, relatives — or toyboys.

This explains why many high-achieving women struggle to match their career success with success in their romantic lives.

They know exactly how to negotiate a deal or ace a boardroom meeting, but when it comes to love, it feels like an uphill battle.

If you find yourself here, you might wonder:

Should I lower my standards? Date younger men? Give up?

1. Understand: Your Situation Is Not Spiritual

The stigma can be nauseating.

It can eat away at your self-esteem, make you question yourself, or even wonder if you're cursed.

I may not be able to tell you if you have flaws or not — we all do — but I can tell you for free: your situation is not spiritual.

Don't go hopping from one religious house to another, begging for deliverance.

Nothing is wrong with you. You are perfectly fine.

And you are definitely not alone. Millions of women across Nigeria, Ghana, Kenya, and beyond face the same struggle.

It's society's sickness to look down on single women, not yours to carry.

Don't internalize it.

2. Treat Getting a Man Like a Game and a Job Search

We hustle for the jobs we want. We research, network, prepare. We know it takes effort.

But when it comes to love, many leave it to chance. At your level, you already know: There are two types of people — those who make things happen, and those who wait for things to happen to them.

You've waited long enough. Where has it gotten you? It's time to change the strategy. Treat finding a partner like you're on a mission — somewhere between a strategic job search and a fun game. Be intentional. Have fun. Don't be too serious, but don't treat it like a joke either.

And if you haven't already, revisit Chapters 1, 3, 4, and 5 — where I shared practical steps on how to get his attention, how to make him come to you, and how to build magnetic attraction.

3. Shift Your Mindset

If you think you're single because of your education, your career, or your age — think again.

Your accomplishments are assets, not liabilities.

Here are some statistics to back it up:

- A 2005 article in the American Journal of Sociology found that women in positions of power are sexier to men than women in less powerful roles.
- 71% of high-achieving men said a woman's career success makes her more desirable as a wife.

- 92% of successful men say they are more attracted to women who are successful too.
- 89% of high-achieving men want to marry a woman as intelligent (or more intelligent) than they are.
- 68% of single, successful men say they want a woman as committed to her career as they are.

Times are changing. Men are realizing that a successful woman is an asset, not a threat.

4. Men Are Evolving

Yes, some men still feel intimidated by powerful women. But many don't — especially younger men under 40. Today's men grew up seeing women win — CEOs, politicians, doctors, entrepreneurs. They aren't scared of power; they're used to it.

A real, confident man feels empowered and proud of a strong woman. He doesn't see her as competition, he sees her as a partner.

The myth that men are "afraid" of independent women assumes that most men lack self-confidence. And that's simply not true.

5. Let Him Know You're Not His Competition

Someone once said, "99% of the men highly successful women want to meet don't want to meet them romantically."

That's an exaggeration. But there's a grain of truth.

Men don't mind doing business with a powerful woman.

But when it comes to a relationship, they fear constant competition.

They don't want to compete at work and then come home to compete again.

This is why on first dates, it's a mistake to lead with your résumé — your degrees, your salary, your titles.

You don't need to prove yourself. Your energy already speaks for you.

In fact, listing your accomplishments can repel a man because it feels masculine and competitive. Attraction needs polarity — masculine and feminine energies pulling toward each other.

Learn how to be the alpha executive at work, but the soft, confident woman in romance.

Let him feel that at home, he has a partner, not a competitor.

Not just with words. But with your actions, your softness, your presence.

That's the secret Funmi learned.

That's the shift that changed everything for her. And it can change everything for you too.

Part 2: Get The Guy

Chapter 7: The Table and 12 Questions

I was having a conversation with a lady who attended one of my online seminars in 2022.

Lovely girl, full of life, dreams, and ambition.

As we spoke, I asked her a simple question:

"If a man gives you money, status, love, security, and leadership... what exactly are you bringing to the table for him?"

She paused.

Looked at me like I had spoken Greek.

Then after a while, she smiled and said,

"I'm beautiful, I'm smart, I have my own money, and I can give him peace of mind."

I smiled too.

Because honestly, that's the answer most women give.

It sounds good, but it's surface-level.

So I asked her again, softly this time,

"But what are you really offering... apart from your body and your achievements?"

She looked confused.

And that's when it hit me, a lot of women don't really understand that relationships are an exchange.

Not a transaction, no. An exchange of value.

A successful man, the kind most women pray for, he is not just looking for beauty, or a fine face, or a woman with certificates hanging on her wall.

He's looking for something deeper.

Something rarer.

And that's where this conversation really begins...

Because think about it...

Good in bed? e plenty for market.

Smart? Thousands have degrees.

Rich? There are plenty of rich women today.

That's why successful men are looking for something deeper.

Something more real.

Here's what truly makes a woman stand out to the kind of man you are praying for:

- Self-sufficiency
- Gratefulness
- Contentment
- The ability to see good in yourself and others
- Non-judgmental acceptance
- Interest in your own life and purpose
- Setting goals and chasing them
- Ability to enjoy life without complaints
- The ability to be quiet when needed

- Willingness to follow a strong man's lead
- Good communication without blame or judgment
- Serving with confidence, not bitterness

Now, do a quick mental check.

How many of these qualities do you honestly have?

Because listen, these are the qualities that make a man stay.

Not just any man, but a man of high standards.

12 Silent Questions Successful Men Ask Before Getting Serious

You say you want a rich, successful man, right? Fine. But ask yourself: if a successful man sizes you up today, will you pass?

Because trust me, they size women up, quietly.

They watch. They observe. They know that one wrong woman can destroy 20 years of hard work in 2 minutes.

And incase you don't know, here's what is going on in his mind:

1. Is she a good listener?
2. Can she focus on my good sides and admire them?
3. Can she inspire me to do more?
4. Can she trust me enough to let me lead?
5. Will she get along with my family and friends?
6. Can she make my house a real home?
7. Can she please me and enjoy it too?
8. Can she cook? (Yes, it still matters.)

9. Can she accept me — flaws and all?
10. Is she truly grateful?
11. Can she trust and follow me, even when it's not easy?
12. Is she self-confident and whole?

You don't have to tick all 12. If you can genuinely say yes to at least 7 of these, my sister, you are golden!

Congratulations in advance, because any serious man will see you as a woman worth keeping.

Now, notice something...

None of these questions had anything to do with being the prettiest or the hottest woman in the room.

Yes, physical beauty matters. It helps. But beauty will only attract a man. Character will keep him.

If you focus only on your body and neglect your mind, heart, and spirit, all you will keep attracting are men who want only one thing. And it's not marriage.

Real men are not looking for decoration. They are looking for a partner. They are looking for a queen.

And my prayer for you is that you grow into that queen you were created to be.

Chapter 8: How You're Pushing Him Away

When I dated my husband then, I almost ruined everything with my own hands.

At the start, everything felt so good. The connection, the chemistry, the way he looked at me, it was like something out of a movie. But deep down, I was scared. I wanted constant reassurance. I would call too much, text too often, and ask unnecessary questions just to feel secure.

In my mind, I thought I was showing love.

But in his mind, I was showing insecurity.

One day, he said something I will never forget:

"You are amazing, but sometimes it feels like you don't trust yourself enough."

That hit me hard.

I realized I was acting out of fear, not confidence.

I was being needy.

And if I did not stop, I would lose the man who would later become my husband.

So I did the hardest thing, I worked on myself.

I learned to trust myself more.

I stopped needing constant validation.

I gave him space to chase me, to invest in me, to feel safe around me.

And you know what happened?

Our relationship blossomed. The bond grew deeper.

He proposed. We got married.

We started taking luxury holidays together; Dubai, Zanzibar, living the soft life I once thought only happened in movies.

Not because I begged for it. Not because I forced it.

But because I became the woman who was secure in herself.

The woman he wanted to spoil and travel the world with.

That experience taught me a painful but powerful truth:

Insecurity and neediness are the biggest killers of attraction.

They are like hemlock and arsenic. Either one will poison your relationship.

A woman is needy when she craves attention or recognition.

She shows insecurity when she acts on those cravings.

Insecurity shows up when a woman does not feel comfortable with who she is or confident in her environment.

She becomes tentative, weak, and unsure.

She tries to put on a show of confidence, but it feels fake.

She says or does things that are obviously for approval.

Men pick up on this instantly. They might not say it, but they feel it.

Here are some examples of insecurity and neediness you must avoid:

- Rushing a man

Do not flood him with calls and texts at the beginning. Men see it as a red flag. Instead, lean back. Let him get comfortable around you. Let him pursue you naturally.

- Talking negatively about men or past relationships

Talking too much about exes or bad experiences with men makes you seem bitter and insecure. A confident woman talks about the present and future, not old wounds.

- Having emotional outbursts

If you easily get upset or react strongly to small issues, it signals emotional instability. Men prefer women who can stay calm and composed under pressure.

- Relying on others to make decisions

Men admire women who know what they want. If you constantly ask, "What do you think I should do?" or "Where do you want to go?", you will come across as unsure and needy. Make decisions. Own them.

- Trying too hard to get noticed

You do not need to show off or fish for compliments. If you are truly amazing, your energy will speak louder than your words ever could.

- Arguing unnecessarily

Some people argue for the sake of being right. But being overly argumentative is a sign of insecurity, not intelligence. If you must disagree, do it playfully and with humor, not with anger.

See, my dear, if you want a man to stay, do not chase him. Chase your own growth. Chase your own wholeness. Chase your own peace.

Because when a woman is secure in herself, the right man will do everything to be part of her life. Not out of pity. Not out of pressure. But out of pure desire.

So here's my advice: Stop trying to prove you are good enough.

Start believing you are good enough. Because you are.

The woman who knows her worth does not beg for love. She becomes the love.

She becomes the home. Just like I did.

Chapter 9: Some Popular Myths About Men

Women are a mystery to men.

And truth is, men are a mystery to women too.

When it comes to relationships, everybody has one theory or the other.

You'll hear things like "men are from Mars, women are from Venus" — all those popular sayings.

But if we're being honest, men are not that complicated.

At least not in the way many women think.

Of course, some women will disagree, strongly. And that's fine.

In this chapter, I just want to share a few things. Not from books or gossip. But from real experience.

From a woman who has lived it, felt it, and understands the journey a little better.

Let's clear the air. Let's tell the truth. Once and for all.

Myth 1: Men Only Care About A Woman's Appearance

Tbh, this one is just plain foolishness.

See, it's only shallow men that care only about looks. Those ones are not looking for a real partner; they are looking for a trophy to polish and show off. Like a mannequin or a baby doll. Nothing more.

A normal, mature man and successful man that spoils his lady will see beauty first, that's natural. Men are visual creatures, it's true.

But after that, he's looking deeper: your mind, your heart, your spirit, your dreams.

Real attraction is not just body deep. It's emotional, mental, and even spiritual for some men.

Beauty can attract him, but who you are will keep him.
Always remember that.

Myth 2: Men Are Not Emotional

Big lie. Men are emotional. Men just learned early in life that "real men don't cry," "real men don't show weakness."

They wired it into their brains like it's part of the Ten Commandments.

Meanwhile, girls were encouraged to feel, cry, talk, express.

Boys? Had to toughen up, swallow their pain, hide their hearts.

So it's not that they don't feel.

They feel deeply, they just don't always show it.

Unless they trust you. Unless they know you won't mock or shame him.

In fact, it's real masculinity to feel.

To cry when you're hurt.

To love deeply.

To chase after what makes your heart beat faster.

Anybody who tells you otherwise is lying. Simple.

Myth 3: Men Don't Want Their Woman to Earn More

Another outdated gist.

The idea that a man must always be the bigger earner is from our parents' generation.

The world is changing. Fast.

These days, more women are becoming breadwinners. And it's not a threat to real men. In fact, a secure man will be proud of his woman's success.

Some men may feel insecure at first, not because they hate your success, but because society made them believe their worth is tied to being the provider.

But love > ego.

If the man loves you truly, he will grow with you, not fight you.

Simple.

Myth 4: Women Are More Romantic Than Men

Lol, romance does not have gender.

Some men are hopeless romantics; some women are hardcore realists. It's individual.

If you want to know how romantic you are, check these out:

- You believe in love at first sight.
- You fall hard when you fall.
- You believe there's a soul mate out there.
- You think passion can last forever.

If you said 'yes' to most, congrats, you're a hopeless romantic. 😂

Romance is not "man thing" or "woman thing" — it's a personality thing.

Myth 5: He Won't Respect You If You Sleep With Him on the First Date

Please. Let's stop deceiving ourselves.

Most men don't judge based on when you had sex.

In fact, some relationships that started with first-night fireworks ended in marriage and bliss.

Respect is not tied to sex. It's tied to character.

But listen, as a friend, let me advise you:

Don't rush into sex if your emotions are not stable.

Because women naturally bond through sex — blame oxytocin. That chemical will make you catch feelings even if the guy is an idiot.

And when an idiot ghosts you after sex, it will pain you ten times more.

Protect your heart. Not because of what he will think, but for your own peace of mind.

Myth 6: Men Don't Like Women Asking Them Out

Lol... this is 2025, "Wake up."

Most men LOVE it when a confident woman makes the first move. It's sexy.

Only an insecure man will be intimidated. Research shows that 90% of men are comfortable with women asking them out.

So if you see a guy you like, shoot your shot. The right man will respect you even more for it. The wrong man? Forget him. He's not worthy of your vibe.

Men are not the enemy. Women are not the enemy. We're just different species trying to learn each other's language. Let's stop judging based on old tales and start loving with fresh eyes and open hearts.

Chapter 10: 7 Characters of Men that are Not Ready for Marriage

I wish I was just sharing theory with you.

I wish this was something I read in a book.

But it's not.

I lived it.

See, I spent 4 long years of my life with a man who was never ready for marriage.

I loved him. I gave my best. I prayed. I fasted. I fought for the relationship harder than I had ever fought for anything.

But in the end, I lost.

And do you know the worst part?

It wasn't because I wasn't good enough. It wasn't because I didn't try.

It was because he was never ready.

And no amount of love, loyalty, or patience could make him become who he wasn't prepared to be.

If you're reading this right now, I need you to hear me clearly: you cannot help a man grow into readiness.

He either is... or he is not.

Let me show you how you can know early, so you don't waste precious years like I did.

Let's talk about the 7 signs:

1. He Blows Hot and Cold

One minute he would text me 17 times a day — "I miss you," "Can't live without you," "You're my peace."

The next minute, he would disappear into thin air. No calls. No texts. Silence.

I would cry myself to sleep wondering, What did I do wrong?

But the truth was, I didn't do anything.

He was battling himself, and losing.

Emotionally unavailable men don't have the capacity to be consistent. They love the idea of you but not the commitment of loving you.

2. He Chooses Physical Intimacy Over Emotional Intimacy

He never wanted to talk about the future.

If I brought up marriage, he would sigh and say, "Let's just enjoy the moment."

But let me tell you something, when a man wants you, he plans with you.

He builds a future in his mind that has your name on it.

If he's dodging that conversation, he is dodging commitment.

3. He Is a Penny Pincher

He could spend 2.5M on gadgets and clothes for himself but would tell me, "Babe, money is tight," if I needed 250k for something important.

I used to tell myself, He is saving for our future.

No, sis. He was investing in himself, and keeping me as an option.

Love gives. Real love gives joyfully.

4. You Feel Excluded

When he traveled for work, I found out from his Instagram stories.

When he bought a new car, I heard from his friends.

When he made life-changing decisions, I was the last to know.

I always felt like an outsider, fighting for scraps of information, begging to be included.

If a man truly loves you, you will be his first thought, not his afterthought.

5. He Won't Contact You Every Day

He would go 2 or 3 days without checking on me and when I complained, he would say,

"I'm just busy, babe."

But no one is ever too busy for who they care about.

It takes 10 seconds to send a "How are you?" text.

Even in a hospital bed, a man who loves you will find a way to reach you.

Consistency is love in action.

6. He Gets More from the Relationship

I was always the one calling, texting, visiting, giving, forgiving.

I carried the relationship on my back while he cruised.

And when I got tired, when I needed him to carry me for once, he let me fall.

Relationships are supposed to be two people pouring into each other.

If you're the only one doing all the pouring, you'll soon run dry.

7. He Has No History of Long-Term Relationships

He had never been in any serious relationship before me, but I told myself I would be different.

I thought I would be the one he would finally settle down for.

But past patterns hardly lie.

A man who has never built anything lasting in the past often doesn't know how to sustain love.

My deer, I stayed with him for 4 years, believing, hoping, praying.

And the day he left, he said

"You're a wonderful woman. I just don't think I'm ready for this kind of commitment."

Those words broke me.

Not because I lost him. But because I lost time, tears, self-esteem, and hope chasing a man who wasn't even running toward me.

Sis, don't be like me.

If you see any of these signs, don't negotiate it.

Don't excuse it. Don't think your love will heal it.

Walk away.

The right man will be ready.

He will choose you.

And you won't have to beg him to love you right.

Part 3: Keep The Guy

Chapter 11: Why Men Ghost Women

If you have never been ghosted in your life ehn, God bless you specially!

In fact, you need to sow a thanksgiving seed because your beauty and glory is not of this world.

It's divine. It's unfair. And this chapter may NOT be for you.

But for the rest of us, my dear sisters , being ghosted can pain.

Like you'll just be there, smiling sheepishly at your phone, thinking you have found "the one"... only for the person to vanish like rapture. No goodbye. No explanation. Just NOTHING.

You'll be refreshing chat every 5 minutes like mumu.

If you're dating in this generation, my dear, ghosting is like baptism, you must experience it. And sometimes, let me be honest, you too, you would have ghosted somebody without even knowing.

It's part of the gbas gbos of love life

And listen when I say this:

When a man ghosts you, it's not a loss. It's a redirection.

So if you're serious about attracting a committed, godly, wealthy man, the kind who knows what he wants and isn't afraid to build with a woman, then you need to start seeing ghosting as God's way of clearing the path.

Clearing out the boys to make room for the men.

Now, let's look at why some men ghost so you can recognize the signs early and position yourself properly.

1. He Never Wanted Anything Serious in the First Place

Not every man you meet is on the path to commitment.

Some are just out here for vibes, for fun, for "let's see where this goes" energy — and nowhere is exactly where it's going.

Listen carefully: If you're in a season where you know you want something real — a godly relationship, a future, a family, you cannot afford to waste time entertaining men who are looking for temporary entertainment.

A man who is ready for commitment won't waste your time.

And when you carry yourself with clarity and confidence, a man who isn't serious will know it without you saying a word, and he'll quietly exit the stage. That's a win.

2. He Wasn't Sure If You Were Interested

There's a difference between being a prize and being a puzzle.

Some women overplay the "hard to get" card until it becomes "impossible to connect." They don't return texts, don't show any genuine interest, and leave the man second-guessing if he's even wanted there at all.

A rich, committed man doesn't have time for confusion. He's not going to stay where he's unsure. If you're interested, let your warmth show. You don't have to chase. But you do need to create a welcoming atmosphere.

If you're truly busy, be honest about it. Let him know you're interested, but your time is stretched. A real man will appreciate your honesty and meet you where you are.

3. He Picked Up on Needy Energy

Needy energy repels high-value men faster than you can say "where are you?"

Needy doesn't just mean asking for money, although that's part of it.

It's the emotional neediness too: texting every second, getting upset if he doesn't respond immediately, expecting him to fill every empty space in your heart.

Understand this:

A man, even a good man, cannot be your everything.

If you want to attract a committed, blessed, rich man, you have to be whole already.

You have to know who you are in Christ, have your own life, your own peace, your own identity.

When you are full, you attract a man who is full too.

And two whole people building together? That's unstoppable.

4. He Realized You Weren't a Good Fit

Sometimes, it's just not a match.

And that's okay.

If the conversations feel forced, the connection feels dry, or you notice he's pulling away, don't chase. Don't force chemistry where there is none.

Attraction and compatibility can grow, yes. But some things like basic emotional connection, can't be manufactured.

A wealthy, committed man is looking for a woman he connects with naturally. Not perfectly, but easily.

If you have to strain, explain, overperform... he's not your Odugwu.

Smile, bless him in your heart, and move on with grace.

If you ever get ghosted, don't internalize it. Don't start doubting your beauty, your value, or your destiny.

Please don't chase them, either.

Don't cry like your destiny is tied to them.

Don't go and beg someone that is already thanking God for escaping you.

Hold your head high.

Thank God for the closed door. And move forward.

Because when it happens, better man will always shows up, You will thank God you didn't end up with that ghoster

You are a full package. A treasure. A prize. Don't ever forget that.

Chapter 12: 4 Rules to Avoid Dead-End Relationships

There are a lot of dead ends in life.

Dead-end roads.

Dead-end jobs.

And maybe the most painful of all... “dead-end relationships”.

A dead-end relationship will waste your time, your emotions, your energy, and worst of all, it will waste your life.

Especially if what you really want is a rich, serious man who knows where he's going, and wants you to go there with him.

Wasting years with someone who doesn't even know what he wants? God forbid bad thing!

Let's talk about the simple rules that will help you avoid time-wasters, and stay open for the kind of man that will actually add to your life. Not drain it.

Rule 1: Thou Shall Know The Signs

One thing about unserious men: they always show themselves.

The problem is either you don't know the signs, or you see the signs and play blind.

(And is it not love that used to blind people?)

If you're serious about attracting the kind of man who is ready to commit, has money, has focus, and is thinking about the future, you cannot afford to miss red flags.

Some signs are loud and clear. Some are quiet whispers.

But either way, you must learn them, recognize them, and act fast.

I broke down 15 major signs later in this book. Study them like your life depends on it. Because in a way, it does.

Rule 2: Thou Shall Not Date Without a Clear Purpose

You are not 18 anymore, my sister.

You don't have time to be "vibing" with men that have no plan.

From the first date, you must gauge his seriousness, not by what he says (anybody can talk), but by how he moves.

- Does he sound like a man preparing for a real future?
- Does he have a stable source of income?
- Is he financially responsible?
- Does he live like a man who is ready to lead and build?

You're not asking these questions because you're desperate — no.

You're asking because you're valuable and your time is precious.

A rich, serious man respects a woman who knows what she wants.

He won't be scared by your standards — he'll be impressed.

Rule 3: Thou Shall Not Date a Married Man

This one is simple: Married men are not available.

Their life is already built around someone else.

Their money, their emotions, their time — it's all tied up somewhere else.

If you want a man who can proudly claim you, build with you, and invest fully in you — avoid married men like plague.

Unless you are ready to become second or third wife (and even that one, no guarantee), you are setting yourself up for heartbreak.

No rich, serious, available man will respect a woman who is collecting crumbs from another woman's table.

You deserve the whole cake. Not leftover slices.

Rule 4: Thou Shall Not Move in With Him

I know you love him. I know you want to show him you're a "wife material."

But let me tell you:

Moving in with a man without a ring is a shortcut to see finish.

You will cook. You will clean. You will wash his dirty boxers.

You will give him wife benefits — and he will pay zero bride price.

Meanwhile, rich, serious men are looking for women who preserve their value — not those who give it all away for free.

When a man knows he has to work to earn your partnership, he values you more. When he gets everything without effort, he takes you for granted.

Don't let any man test drive you for free.

You are not a car in the showroom.

You are the prize.

Chapter 13: How to Make Him Choose You Over Other Women

I learnt this from the 24k ladies I met in Paris over five years ago...

In today's world, simply dating a man for a long time is no longer a guarantee.

Men walk away from long-standing relationships every day.

Some women give their hearts for years, yet still watch the man they love choose someone else, often someone they least expect.

Why?

Because men do not choose based on time invested.

They choose based on how a woman makes them feel.

They choose based on how a woman positions herself in his life.

It doesn't matter if you're just getting to know him...

Or if you've been by his side for years...

If you do not learn to become the woman he feels he cannot live without, you risk being passed over. No matter how beautiful or kind you are.

And when you master what I'm about to show you, you will not only inspire him to choose you...

you will inspire him to cherish you above every other woman.

This is how women marry men who, to the outside world, seem "out of their league."

It is not magic. It is not manipulation. It is simply understanding how masculine attraction, emotional imprinting, and deep commitment work.

Let's go over the 5 simple secrets that will make an exceptional man choose you... and never look back.

1. Understand That You Are The Prize

A man who is sought after by many women is used to attention.

What he rarely encounters is a woman who knows, deep within herself, that she is the true prize.

When you believe you are the prize, you do not chase.

You do not audition.

You do not beg to be seen.

You allow yourself to be discovered.

Men of high value are deeply drawn to women who own their worth without arrogance or insecurity.

When you carry yourself this way, softly, confidently, unshakably — he begins to pursue you with focus and seriousness.

He will see in you what he has been searching for, even if he could not articulate it before.

2. Stand Out in an Attractive Way

Men of stature and distinction meet beautiful women every day. What they rarely meet are women who are beautifully different.

Not different for the sake of rebellion. Not different in ways that repel.

Different in ways that delight, intrigue, and inspire admiration.

It could be your softness in a world of hardness...

Your grace in a culture of loudness...

Your ability to stay playful even while being discerning.

A woman who stands out attractively becomes unforgettable.

And wise men do not easily let unforgettable women slip away.

3. Set Elegant Standards for How You Wish to Be Treated

Every powerful woman I have met has one thing in common:

She does not accept just any kind of treatment simply because she loves someone.

She has standards — high ones — and she holds them with grace, not with hostility.

Decide now:

How do you want to be treated by a man?

What gestures matter to you?

What kind of relationship culture do you dream of?

Be specific. Be unapologetic. When you embody these standards, a man who is ready will rise to meet you.

And the ones who are not will quietly fall away.

Either way, you win.

4. Embrace Rotational Dating — With Grace

Until a man makes you a clear, committed offer, you are free to meet and explore your options.

Dating multiple men (without intimacy) keeps your energy radiant, light, and magnetic.

It prevents you from falling too quickly for a man who has not yet earned that level of access to you.

And it sends a subtle but powerful signal into the atmosphere:

"I am desired. I have choices. I am not waiting for you. I am choosing for myself."

The right man, I mean the one meant for you, will feel that energy.

It will stir his masculine pursuit instincts.

And if he is wise, he will move swiftly to claim you.

5. Live a Full, Beautiful Life

A full life is the greatest seduction.

When your days are already filled with purpose, joy, friendships, beauty, laughter, and dreams, a man sees you as a sun he wants to orbit around, not a void he must fill.

He does not feel pressured to be your entire world. Instead, he feels honored to be invited into the incredible world you have already built.

Masculine men are deeply drawn to women whose lives inspire them.

So live beautifully. Dream boldly. Laugh often. Love yourself well.

In doing so, you become magnetic, effortlessly.

Bottom line: men do not always choose the most beautiful woman. They do not always choose the "nicest" woman. They choose the woman who makes them feel something rare, a feeling that they know, deep inside, they may never find again.

Become that woman.

Not through games. Not through desperation.

But by stepping fully into your worth, your beauty, and your power.

And when the right man finds you, he will not just choose you — he will fight to keep you.

Always.

Chapter 14: 15 Signs The Relationship Won't Lead to Marriage

Sometime in 2023, one of my subscribers sent me an email.

She was crying inside that email.

She had spent 7 years with a man who didn't know whether he was coming or going.

No proposal. No proper commitment.

Just empty promises and wasted time.

She said, "Tonye, I'm scared to leave because what if I never find another man?"

I told her the truth: "You're already alone. You're just alone with somebody who is wasting your time."

Listen to me, my sister:

At a certain stage in life, it is better to be single than to be stuck in a dead-end relationship.

Dead-end relationships are dangerous.

They waste your emotions, waste your resources, waste your time, and worst of all, waste your life.

Unfortunately, many women are inside dead-end relationships and don't even know it.

Or they know... but they are struggling to accept the truth.

Here's the hard reality:

- Staying will be hard.

- Walking away will be hard too.

You have to choose your hard. But choose the hard that leads to peace and progress, not pain.

Here are 15 signs that your relationship is heading nowhere, and the faster you recognize them, the faster you can save yourself and open the door for the real man who will value you.

1. Your desire for “space” is increasing.

It's normal to want "me time" once in a while. But if being alone sounds sweeter than seeing him, it's a loud warning.

2. You can't clearly see a future together.

When you look ahead, it's foggy. You're not excited about the next 5, 10, or 20 years with him.

You're just floating day-to-day.

3. You feel a growing sense of time urgency.

There's this voice in your head whispering,

"You're wasting your time here..."

Listen to it.

4. You've put your dreams on hold for him.

Instead of your goals moving forward, you're shrinking yourself for the relationship. That resentment? It's already building.

5. He's unrealistic about what it takes for real success.

He thinks love alone is enough. Meanwhile, rich, serious men know that relationships need hard work, planning, and sacrifices.

6. Lies and half-truths keep popping up.

If you've caught him lying once, twice, thrice, that's not a mistake. That's his character.

7. Your values and beliefs don't match.

Love can't fix fundamental differences in lifestyle, faith, ambition, or vision. Without alignment, you'll struggle forever.

8. You're carrying the relationship on your back.

If you are always initiating conversations, making plans, fixing fights, while he just coasts, you're in a one-sided relationship.

9. You're more confused than clear.

A good man brings clarity, not confusion. If your mind is always spinning trying to "figure things out," you're not in a safe place.

10. You keep apologizing for being yourself.

If you always feel like you're "too much" or "never enough," please run. The right man will celebrate you, not suffocate you.

11. You keep hoping he'll change.

Maybe he'll stop disrespecting you. Maybe he'll finally grow up. Maybe he'll see your worth. Maybe is a dangerous word. Take him as he is. Not as you hope he'll be.

12. You walk on eggshells.

You're always scared you'll say or do the wrong thing. Healthy love gives peace, not panic.

13. The relationship feels imbalanced.

You feel like an employee while he's the boss. Or a beggar while he's the king.

Real love feels like a partnership, not a power struggle.

14. You feel trapped, not treasured.

You stay because of fear, fear of starting over, fear of loneliness.

Fear is not a foundation for a good marriage.

15. Your boredom is leaking into other parts of your life.

You feel lifeless, joyless, uninspired. If your relationship is draining the color out of your life, it's a major red flag.

When your friends ask about your relationship and you have nothing good to say, pay attention.

Silence speaks louder than words.

Listen, beautiful:

You are not crazy. You are not demanding. You are not asking for too much.

You are just tired of being in a dead-end relationship that doesn't honor you.

And the good news?

When you let go of the wrong man, you make space for the right, rich, serious man to come in.

A man who will not waste your time, but build a beautiful life with you.

Thanks for reading!!!

I'm super excited for you.

Yes... you. No really! I mean you.

YOU!

I can't wait to be invited to your wedding, o!

(And don't worry — I'll wear my best aso-ebi.)
